Possible school bond on November ballot:

Voters lukewarm as WUSD studies new bond

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

West Sacramento's school board appeared interested in pursuing a new local school bond or parcel tax on November's ballot, despite a poll showing tepid public support for the idea right now.

At the board's meeting on Feb. 23, district officials heard a report from their polling consultant, Jonathan Kaufman of Solem & Associates.

"We interviewed a sampling of 400 randomly selected voters in the school district," Kaufman told the board.

One of the questions posed was whether such voters would support a $55 million bond that would cost a "typical" homeowner $88 per year in extra taxes. Such a bond on a general election ballot would need 55 percent of the vote to pass. The poll showed 39 percent support, so "we're quite a ways away," said Kaufman.

One probably reason is the economy, he added.

"We're in a 'down' economy, people are (having trouble) paying mortgages, there's high unemployment, and the 2007 (school bond) measure failed," he said. On the other hand, voters responded positively to some of the specific plans that were floated during the interviews, including the offer of creating a citizen's committee to oversee how the tax money is spent. They also liked some of the ideas their money would be used for.

"They liked the idea of a citizens' oversight committee, and they liked the idea of fixing leaky roofs," said Kaufman.

Voters were more receptive to the concept of a smaller bond, such as a $27 million measure that might cost the typical homeowner $44 per year. If there was a large turnout of voters, said Kaufman, such a measure "might squeak through."

As far as a parcel tax, voters were "way short" of supporting an $80/year measure and slightly shy of adequate support for a $40/year tax.

"Only a $27 million bond issue costing homeowners $30/year of assessed value, or (for the typical homeowner), $44/year, receives the required 55 percent (approval)," said Kaufman of his polling results.

The board had talked about a new bond or tax in order to finish work at the new high school campus, build a career & technical education center elsewhere, and perhaps do work such as fixing roofs and updating fire sprinkler systems. A big part of the campaign, said Kaufman, is convincing people the school district would be trustworthy and responsible with their money. And a lot of that trust comes from the district's image in the public eye.

"The more you can communicate to the community that you are good at these tasks, the better you will do," he said. "For public information and education, I think it's important to do that now. The more you can educate people about all the good things you've been doing in the district, the better off you'll be."

How might the economy over the next few months affect the vote:

"If people feel things are moving in the right direction. . . they will be more open to spending money out of their pocket for public things," Kaufman added.

Washington Unified School District has had two years of 20-plus point improvements in its student test scores. Several board members felt the polls showed that West Sacramento voters weren't adequately aware of these gains and other accomplishments.

"We just went through budget cuts and we didn't have to lay off teachers," said board member David Westin. "The numbers coming out of this research are just showing what a mediocre job we're doing (communicating district success)... The school district has an unbelievable story to tell. We're achieving a lot without laying off teachers."

Board president Teresa Blackmer said that new taxes will be problematic to some:

"There are a lot of people on fixed incomes who would be affected drastically by these kinds of decisions," she commented.

Board member Adam Menke requested a special meeting just to focus on where any new bond or parcel tax money would go.

"We can talk all day about going for a bond, but the question would be, how much and for what?" said Menke.

The board agreed to tackle those details in a future meeting.

Heavy response to Yolo Street fire

Five break-ins in one month for West Sacramento kids' football league

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

It's getting to be a nuisance, says Sarah Sieck, league treasurer for the West Sacramento Junior Raiders youth football team.

The squad's snack bar and storage facility have been burglarized way too often in recent weeks, with the most recent break-in on Feb. 27.

"We've had five break-ins now," said Sieck. "We've stopped reporting them. All of them were in February."

The team plays at the "old" River City High School stadium, on the campus on Clarendon Street that is now home to Westmore Oaks Elementary School. Near the school's field and track are a snack bar, ticket booth and a corrugated metal storage container.

"The snack bar has been broken into, and now also the ticket booths," said Sieck. "There were some older cheerleader skirts in storage, and someone just grabbed them and threw them all over the track."

The equipment bin suffered two break-ins in one week alone:

"They took a P.A. (public address) system with speakers, and also the control panel that controls the scoreboard."

PETTY THEFT: A thief or thieves has been breaking the lock on this equipment storage bin belonging to a youth sports league (courtesy of Jr. Raiders)

And from the snack bar:

"The first time, they took all the sodas and candy," said Sieck. "We had several cases of water, and it's like they just took one and threw all the others around. They ransacked it, but they didn't destroy it. We just have to get out there and clean it up."

The first break-in was noticed by members of the River City Gators semi-pro football team, which also practices on the field.

"Jason Kang, the owner, called us and said 'your snack bar is open – I'll prop it closed until you can get here.'" But the break-ins didn't stop. It probably doesn't help that the field isn't very visible at night, and some lights aren't working.

"We have since re-keyed everything," said Sieck. "The first time it appeared someone opened it but there was no damage. We were thinking that it was someone with a key. After that initial break-in, when the candy and sodas were taken, the doors were crowbared open each time and the bolt on the bin was cut.

The damage, all told, is about $4,000 for the youth sports league, including $3,000 for the P.A. system alone.

"That's including boarding up, re-locking, and replacing equipment and supplies," said Sieck. There was no cash stored in the snack bar or ticket booth. But the real cost to those who run the Junior Raiders is not necessarily money.

"It's just so frustrating," said Sieck.

The league is planning a fundraising benefit concert – possibly in June – to help defray some of the costs of the burglaries. The River City Jr. Raiders can be found on the Facebook social networking site for more information.

CORRECTIONS, plus an update: school board restores high school bus service

An article in last week's News-Ledger about possible cuts to local school bus service included several errors in a discussion of other recent budget cuts in the Washington Unified School District.

The school board has not increased class sizes in grades K-3 or 9, or trimmed custodial services, or cut high school counselor staff, as maintained in the article.

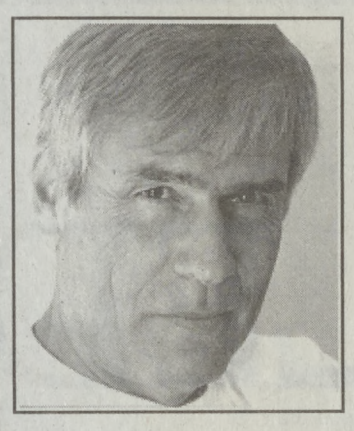
Those items were on a list of possible items to be trimmed from the WUSD budget, but the cuts were not approved, a WUSD spokesperson said last week. The News-Ledger regrets the errors.

In more recent news, the school board voted 3-0 on Thursday to restore plans for afternoon bus service from River City High School (with trustees Dave Westin and Mary Leland absent). A previous board vote had slated afternoon service at RCHS to be canceled..

The board left in place its plans to cut bus service to local K-8 schools for most kids next year.

A Russian whose dreams came true

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

I was talking to a longtime Russian friend of mine the other day and he was terribly sad that Vladimir Putin had won the recent presidential election in the country of his birth.

"There was of course widespread fraud, as there always is in a Russian presidential election," explained my friend, "but even so, I'm sure Putin was the man who received the most votes. Although democracy has a foothold in Russia now, I'm afraid it will be many years – decades actually – before things really start to change. Change has never been easy in Russia, and most of the people who live there are still afraid of it. And as long as that is true, terrible men like Putin will continue to win elections. But someday a man who truly loves freedom will be Russia's president, and then it will become the great nation it deserves to be."

As our conversation continued, I was suddenly reminded of a wonderful little biography a very bright and wise-beyond-her-years River City High School student had submitted to me way back when I was substitute teaching in the 1990s. It was so moving and well-written that I saved a copy of it, and part of it went like this:

My name is Irina. I am almost 18 years old and I am 5'6" tall and I weigh 115 pounds. I have medium-length auburn hair and very dark brown eyes. I'm afraid I do not smile easily as I would like, but that is because my life has been difficult and my dreams still seem so very far away.

I have spent most of my life in Khabarosk, which is in the Russian Far East, just northwest of Japan's northern most island. Khabarosk's climate is very hot in the summer and very cold in the winter. It is not a nice place to live, and my friends and I were always looking for a way to leave. We didn't want to end up like most of our parents, who were trapped in a lifeless city and a dying country, both of which offer little hope for someone like me ever having a good job or bright future.

My mother was a teacher there, but she only earned $25 a month, and because she was employed by the government, she could never be sure if she would get paid. Sometimes they would tell her that they were all out of money and that they would pay her later, but the value of Russia's money is always changing, always going down, and my mother never had enough money to live a normal life.

My father was once a very respected airplane pilot, but just as our country has gone downhill, so did he. He would just sit around the house and drink vodka. My father and I no longer talked and discussed our problems. He became an alcoholic. And then he left me and my mother.

Today, Russia is still having very hard times, and that is why my mother and I finally left. Robbery and crime there are completely out of control and getting worse all the time. Everyone is tense. No one trusts anyone else. If you said or did the wrong thing you could get killed. People don't believe in anything, and they think it's okay to break all the rules. My grandmother put money into the bank for me every month of her life since I was a little baby, but then one day the bank was no longer good, and all the money was just gone.

Even if people did have a little money, in Khabarosk there was very little to buy. Clothes and shoes were difficult to find, even ones that were ugly and uncomfortable to wear. We felt lucky to just get to stand in long lines and buy a little food.

When I was younger I went to school and did very well. I wanted to someday become a doctor. But in many places in Russia, doctors get no more respect than a taxi cab driver or a laborer and they do not get paid much better, either. So I decided to study English, hoping that someday I could go to America. I also studied dance, and dancing kept me in good physical shape and also helped me to forget, at least for awhile, just how terrible my life was.

It was around this time that I learned that you can't really get anywhere in Russia without someone's help. No matter how hard you work, you are at the mercy of others. I also learned that only men are powerful in Russia, and that women are second-class citizens and their thoughts and opinions are rarely taken into consideration when important decisions are made. Plus in Russia, a man only respects his mother, and the mother of his children, and he cares very little what happens to any other woman. There are so many mean and violent men in Russia, and many of them are a part of the Mafia and proud to have spent time in prison.

The only way a person can really go from Khabarosk to Moscow is by plane. You can take the train, but it is a seven-day trip and you must take all your own food and be prepared to get very little sleep and always be dirty. You cannot take a shower and dirt and dust are always blowing through the windows. You also have to worry about bandits robbing you. It is a terrible journey, but it is what my mother and I had to do to get to Moscow, so that we could finally get on the plane that took us to America.

In Russia, a man only respects his mother, and the mother of his children, and he cares very little what happens to any other woman. There are so many mean and violent men in Russia, and many of them are a part of the Mafia and proud to have spent time in prison.

I came to know a lot about the United States because I went to hundreds of American movies and also watched lots of American soap operas on television. When I first studied English, it was easy to learn the words, but when I actually listened to people speaking that language, it was hard to think of what they meant quickly enough. But I slowly got better and I am very comfortable speaking and writing English now.

I have been in America for almost two years now. I study and I work hard, just like I did in Russia, but it is different here. Someday I want to go to law school, and here there is hope for that. Here a woman can gain the respect of a man. Here there are people who want to help others for the right reasons. Here there is a future. And when people ask me what I do in my spare time for fun, I tell them I dream dreams that can come true.

New city child care facility opens on West Capitol

From the City of West Sacramento

The City of West Sacramento is opening a new preschool and childcare center this month. It's called "Learning Ladder," and it's inside the West Sacramento Community Center. Learning Ladder will focus on childcare and preschool education, with competitive prices and scholarships offered.

Learning Ladder has room for 48 children, ages 2-5 and will accommodate local families and those with members are employed in West Sacramento.

The City's effort to promote child care dates to 1987, when childcare impact fees were originally established. Mayor Christopher Cabaldon later appointed then-City Council member Carolyn Pierson in 2003 to chair a Universal Preschool Task Force, which led to the formation of the City's Power of Preschool program, "UP 4 WS."

Over 2,000 children have been served by UP 4 WS, during the past seven years. UP 4 WS has also been supported by its partners, First 5 of Yolo and First 5 California, with contributions by the Washington Unified School District and the Yolo County Office of Education. The City's Mayor Pro Tem, Oscar Villegas, currently serves as the chair of the executive board which presides over UP 4 WS.

Research over the years has shown that investing in high quality early learning opportunities, such as preschool, positively prepares children for kindergarten and their entire school careers. Children gain the cognitive and social skills essential to adult lives.

Learning Ladder is part of West Sacramento's Community Center, located at 1075 West Capitol Ave., a facility which opened in March of last year.

The Civic Center is also the home of the West Sacramento Center of Sacramento City College, at 1115 West Capitol Ave.

For more information about Learning Ladder, contact Justine Jimenez, director of Early Learning Services for the City of West Sacramento, (916) 617-4500.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. Letters to the Editor

Enjoy the show

Everyone is invited to join the fun when Yolo County celebrities "strut their stuff" Thursday night, March 29th at the West Sacramento City Hall Galleria. Tickets for the Yolo County Children's Alliance and Child Abuse Prevention Council annual celebrity fund raiser are $45 each and the proceeds will go to support the work of YCCA, including our child abuse prevention programs.

The 3rd Annual Yolo County "Celebrity Fashion Show" will feature many Yolo County elected officials, business community leaders while showcasing local boutiques and clothiers. In past years, more than 200 government, community and business leaders have attended the popular event. Of special note this year, Scott Moak, "Voice of the Sacramento Kings" will be the emcee, and special appearances are planned by the River Cats' "Dinger,"; the Kings' "Slamson," and West Sacramento's own "Mooie!"

Critical YCCA and child abuse prevention programs supported through this annual fund raiser include counseling support to pregnant women and families with newborns, Baby Steps, home visits through the Step-by-Step / Paso a Paso program; free food distribution of fresh produce, the Community Health Initiative, and Foster Parent Recruitment. We also distribute free clothing, diapers, shoes and jackets to keep children adequately dressed and warm.

We live in stressful times, and stress, combined with substance abuse, often leads to a dangerous home environment for children. We remind everyone who has the opportunity to influence the life of a child, that "It Only Takes a Minute" to have a positive effect on a child by showing him/her that you care and that they are important to you.

Celebrity Fashion Show tickets are available online at www.yolokids.org or by calling the Yolo County Children's Alliance and Child Abuse Prevention Council at 530-757-5558.

Author Chris Pavone is firing on all cylinders in his debut novel. He slowly builds tension and methodically crafts a story with an end game that is so elaborately executed, readers will shake their heads in awe and disbelief. No one -- not a single character -- is who she or he appears to be. The plot twists come fast and furious with the action building to a spectacular climax.

Pavone writes convincingly from the female perspective, and readers of both women's fiction and espionage thrillers will enjoy "The Expats." Kate Moore is a full-dimensional female protagonist who, in spite of living a daily charade, will stop at nothing to protect and defend her family.

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS

BY SAM STRUCKHOFF

DVD PICKS OF THE WEEK

"The Muppets" (PG) -- The felt hasn't faded a bit. The Muppets return with all of their innocence and silliness without coming off as too dated. The story follows Walter, a young, puppet-like fellow, and his friends Gary (Jason Segel) and Mary (Amy Adams) as they go on a journey to reunite the Muppets and save the Muppet Theatre from evil oil tycoons.

A bit of self-referential humor helps blow the dust off the franchise, but the rest of the show is pure new energy. The freshness has even been endorsed by the Academy, as "The Muppets" won the Oscar for best original song. Segel, who helped write the script, is a musically inclined, goofy-grin kind of guy who beams real admiration for the Muppets and fits right in as a human sidekick.

"The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo" (R) -- David Fincher ("Fight Club," "Se7en") directs this mystery-novel adaptation with his eye for the dark and grungy. A wealthy old businessman calls on a legally troubled journalist (Daniel Craig) to solve a decades-old missing-person mystery. Craig enlists the help of the titular inked young woman (Rooney Mara), a damaged, deviant, sneering, whip-smart computer hacker.

The film stumbles a bit in storytelling, but sells it all on style. If complicated characters and relationships taking a grim look at the demons beneath surface of Swedish society appeal to you, then pick up the book or see the Swedish film adaptation. If a slightly sillier, more veneered version is all you have time for, then this Hollywood take will do fine.

"Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy" (R) -- This British spy flick is all about subtlety, paranoia and brain-raking anxiety. Gary Oldman plays George Smiley, a disgraced spy brought back into the agency to ferret out a double agent. It's dense, dark and darn good for those who can get their teeth into it.

This is as far from 007 as a British espionage thriller can get. Make no mistake, it is a thriller -- in its own, gaunt, dimly lit, grey-skies kind of way. The twisted mysteries and intrigue can pay off as much as any chase-scene with a rocket-powered submarine/automobile.

"Carnage" (R) -- In a short opening sequence in the park, one kid hits another. When the respective parents meet in a nice Brooklyn apartment to settle things amicably and maturely, things spiral into a collective tantrum by the supposedly put-together couples. Jodie Foster, John C. Riley, Kate Winslet and Christoph Waltz all dig into their roles, but if you're not pulled in by the forced smiles and underlying hypocrisies, you'll be put to sleep by this single-setting dark comedy.

Kate Moore's life in Washington, D.C., might appear normal, but she is hiding a secret life working as an analyst and former operative for the CIA. When her husband is offered a lucrative job in Luxembourg, Kate welcomes the opportunity to start fresh and leave behind her double life. She reinvents herself as an expatriate, or "expat," and a stay-at-home mother, who fills her days with household chores, afternoon play dates, and lunch or coffee with other expat mothers.

As her husband works increasingly long hours at a job Kate has never understood and for an employer she doesn't know, her isolation and loneliness grows and doubts arise about her marriage. When a mysterious American couple arrives in Luxembourg, Kate becomes convinced that they are not who they claim to be, and she fears her past life has finally caught up to her.

Kate uses her skills as a spy to uncover the secrets of the people who surround her, including her own husband, who harbors the biggest secret of all. Kate soon finds herself mired in layers of deceit so deep and multi-layered, they threaten her family, her marriage and

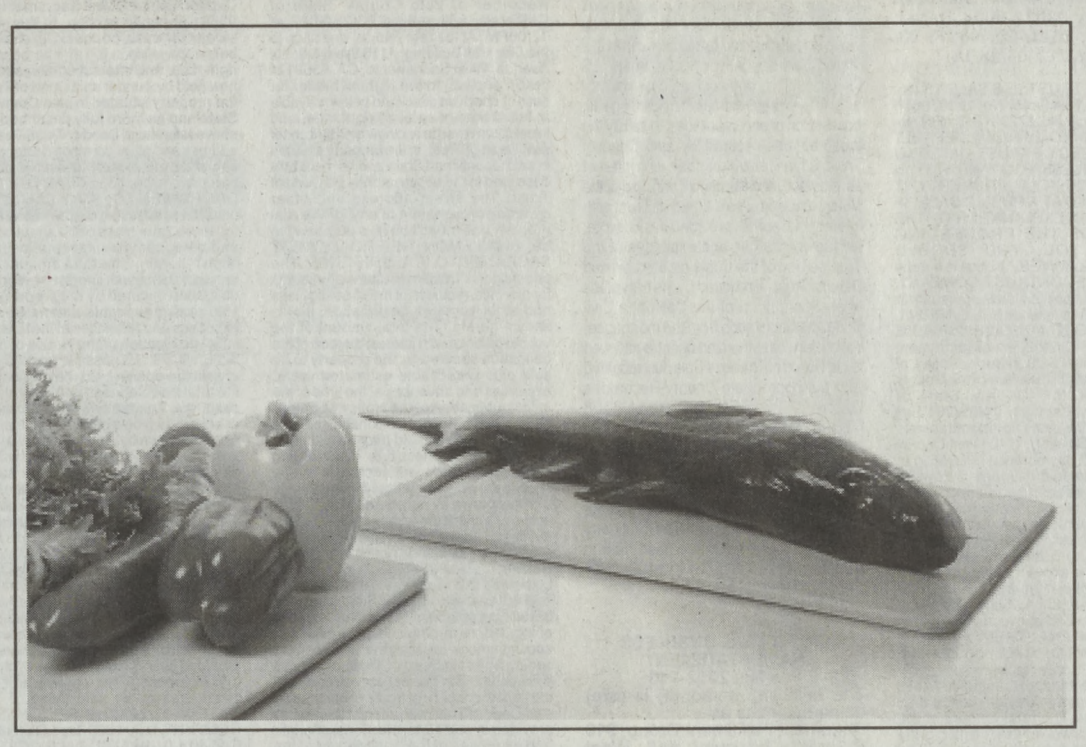
Fishing for Brain Food



A study released last year regarding U.S. dietary guidelines recommends at least two to three servings of seafood a week to ensure healthy levels of omega-3 fatty acids. These essential fatty acids play a crucial part in normal brain growth, development and function. In cases where seafood cannot be consumed, fish-oil supplements are recommended to maintain healthy brains and protect your heart. Our bodies can't produce omega-3 fatty acids, so eating fish -- particularly fatty fish such as mackerel, lake trout, herring, sardines, albacore tuna, salmon, tilapia and catfish -- and other seafood including algae and krill, some plants and nut oils at least twice a week is recommended.

If you've been reluctant to add more seafood to your diet because of the cost, you might try budget-friendly "U.S. Farm-Raised Catfish," one of the freshest and healthiest fish available. The fish are raised in pure freshwater ponds and fed a strict diet of nutritious grains, which not only ensures quality but also gives U.S. catfish a mild flavor that works in almost any recipe.

Thanks to our hardworking American farmers, you can rely on fresh U.S. catfish year-round. Just be sure to look for the U.S. Farm-Raised seal, and you'll know you're getting the best. This recipe for North African-Style Fish with Couscous is the perfect showcase for these fresh, flavorful fish.

Remember, eat more fish! Your body and brain will thank you.

NORTH AFRICAN-STYLE FISH WITH COUSCOUS

2 tablespoons olive oil
2 red onions, sliced into thin rings
2 tablespoons raisins
3 tablespoons salted, roasted cashew nuts
1 red bell pepper, seeded and sliced into thick rings
1 yellow bell pepper, seeded and sliced into thick rings
1 green bell pepper, seeded and sliced into thick rings
4 fresh, firm, ripe tomatoes, blanched, peeled, seeded and sliced into thick rounds
1-1/2 cups fish or vegetable stock, mixed with 3/4 cup water
1-1/2 pounds U.S. Farm-Raised Catfish, tilapia, cod, or salmon fillets, cut into 1 1/4 inch cubes
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 tablespoon fresh parsley, chopped

Couscous
2 cups quick-cooking couscous
2 cups vegetable stock or water, boiling
2 teaspoons whipped butter
1/4 cup diced carrots
1/4 cup pine nuts
1/4 cup dried currants
2 green onions, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon salt

1. Heat half the oil in a large, heavy skillet, and saute half the onions on medium to high heat for 6 to 8 minutes, or until very dark golden, stirring constantly. Using a slotted spoon, remove fried onions from the oil, place on paper towels and set aside. Fry raisins in the same hot oil until they plump. Remove with the slotted spoon and add to fried onions. Fry the cashews for about 1 minute. Remove and add to raisin-and-onion mix.

2. Add the remaining oil to the skillet and fry remaining half of onions until golden. Add bell peppers and continue cooking for about 10 minutes, or until peppers are soft. Add the tomatoes and stock, partially cover and cook for about 10 minutes on medium to low heat.

3. Stir fish through the onion and pepper mixture. Taste and season with salt, pepper and cayenne pepper. Continue simmering for 10 minutes, or until the fish is tender. Do not forget to stir periodically to prevent sticking.

4. To make the couscous, place the couscous grains in a large, deep dish with a lid. Pour in the boiling stock and stir in butter, carrots, scallions, pine nuts, dried currants and salt. Cover and set aside to keep warm for about 15 minutes so the couscous can absorb liquid and swell up. Fluff couscous by raking through it with a fork.

5. Carefully pour the fish mixture over the couscous and gently fold it through to mix thoroughly into a colorful presentation. Sprinkle with onion rings, raisins, cashew nuts and parsley.

Serve immediately. Serves six.
